*So I return to where I began,
I go because I must:
I return to the dust of which I was formed

A Report on One Day State Level Seminar

On the Topic:

“Coexistence of Beauty and the Beast: Reading North-East Indian English Poetry”

The Department of English and IQAC of JRM College orchestrated a one-day state-level seminar on April 8th, 2022, delving into the theme of “Coexistence of Beauty and the Beast: Reading North-East Indian English Poetry.” This scholarly endeavor aimed to explore the nuanced interplay between beauty and darkness within the poetic landscape of North-East India.

The Seminar Hall of JRM College bustled with intellectual activity as registration commenced promptly at 10:30 am. The formal inauguration ceremony at 11:00 am was graced by Smt. Geetali Bera, the esteemed TIC of the college, who served as the chief patron of the program, infusing the event with authority and significance. Prof. Abdul Halim Shaikh, HOD of the Department of English, extended warm greetings to Prof. Somnath Barui, the keynote speaker of the seminar as a batch of girl students felicitated Mr. Barui with the bouquet of flowers, a uttariya. The audience was enlightened with the introductory speech on the theme of the seminar and on the keynote speaker by the host, Prof. Abdul Halim Shaikh. Finally the resource person began delivering his speech at 11:30.

Prof. Somnath Barui, Assistant Professor at Jalangi Mahavidyalaya, Murshidabad, a distinguished scholar in literary studies, enraptured the audience as the seminar’s esteemed speaker. With eloquence and precision, Prof. Barui navigated through the rich tapestry of North-East Indian English poetry, shedding light on the juxtaposition of beauty and darkness within the region’s literary canon. Prof. Barui tried to correlate the political violence and the vast beautiful natural landscape which are the key ingredients of the North-Eastern literature in his lecture. The beauty is to a great extent affected and merged by the widespread confrontation and separatist movements in the North-Eastern region. The poetry chiefly tried to echo these dichotomies. Prof. Barui presented a very insightful, analytical lecture on both the socio-economic and literary landscape of the North-East.

Throughout the seminar, Prof. Barui's discourse resonated deeply with the audience, comprising students, faculty members, and literary enthusiasts. Attendees actively engaged in discussions, offering diverse interpretations and insights into the complexities of North-East Indian English poetry.

The program concluded with a brief yet engaging question and answer session, allowing participants to delve deeper into the themes explored. As the day ended, attendees departed the Seminar Hall with enriched insights into the cultural and literary nuances of North-East Indian English poetry, reaffirming the enduring relevance of the region's poetic legacy.
