Theme Background

The role of women in India has evolved significantly, from traditional homemakers to active participants in the workforce. This transformation has been driven by education, economic necessity, and policy reforms. Home productivity, once confined to unpaid domestic labor, now extends to entrepreneurial and remote work opportunities. Increased female labor participation has contributed to financial independence and societal progress. Over the ages, enlightenment through education and awareness has empowered Indian women to challenge societal norms, balance work and home life, and redefine their roles in a rapidly modernizing country.
